EDITOR'S NOTE

This edition of the Florida A&M University Law Review is entitled The Rule of Law in an Age of Constitutional Uncertainty. The Staff of the Law Review is excited to present this edition, which addresses several topics across a variety of fields. Yet each article has a tethered relationship with the United States Constitution. The notes, articles, and commentary in this edition of the Law Review involve topics with a Constitutional question at their heart. Although they cover many different fields, each addresses the impact of our country's governing document on the specific area of law at hand.

I would like to take a moment to acknowledge and genuinely thank the Editorial Board, Law Review Editorial Staff, and our Academic Adviser, Randall S. Abate, for all of their dedication and hard work to this volume of the Law Review. Each and every one of you has had an immeasurable impact on the direction of the Law Review throughout this demanding and stimulating year, and without you, this edition of the Law Review would not be what it is today. It has been a valuable and worthwhile experience to serve as your Editor-in-Chief, and I thank each of you again for your commitment to this publication.
