EDITOR'S NOTE

This edition of the Florida A&M University (FAMU) Law Review represents a collection of articles and notes written by individuals across the United States. The Articles within cover a wide variety of topics from Law Enforcement budgets, use of a Community Patent, Beach Renourishment, the use of economic-based affirmative action, and placing Alaskan Native land into trust. Instead of focusing on one broad subject matter, this Editorial Board decided to take a unique approach and facilitate a journal that covered numerous areas of discussion to show that each of the new members of the Editorial Board are different and an Article or Note discussing different topics that expressed our areas of interest would be a brilliant start to our term as FAMU Law Review's editorial board.

On behalf of the FAMU Law Review staff, and the FAMU College of Law faculty and administration, I would like to thank each author for granting us the privilege of presenting their unique perspectives to the world. It was an amazing experience getting to review and work with these authors.

While the authors are an integral part of a Law Review journal, this issue would not have happened without the hard work and dedication of the FAMU Law Review staff members. I would like to thank the Editorial Board and the senior and junior staff members for their countless hours of work and effort that was put forth in creating this journal.
